Russell was one of Louisville’s earliest and most desirable neighborhoods – with a range of housing types.

By the 1940s, Russell was “Louisville's Harlem” – neighborhood attractions included theaters, restaurants, and night clubs.

The neighborhood’s decline began post World War II, and included the demolition of Russell’s main business district.
The Russell Neighborhood of Louisville is known for its high concentration of subsidized housing.

More than 53% of the neighborhood’s residents live below the poverty line. Violent crime rates for the eastern Russell police beat is over 5 times the City-wide rate.

The long-term vacancy rate for the Russell neighborhood is 26% - over a quarter of its housing stock.
GOALS OF THE PLANNING GRANT

- Transform Russell into a neighborhood of opportunity and choice
- Revitalize Beecher Terrace as part of an overall plan for improving the Russell neighborhood
- Attract investments to the Russell neighborhood to improve quality of life for residents
